HIV/AIDS in New York State: New York State (NYS) leads the nation in both cumulative and annual AIDS cases, and in the incidence of AIDS. As the hope for a cure remains unfulfilled, prevention is the only tool for reducing new incidence of HIV. From the time the epidemic began to the end of 2021, 221,511 New York State residents have been diagnosed with HIV, of which nearly three-quarters were among African-Americans, Hispanics, Asians/Pacific Islanders and Native Americans.¹ In 2021, there were an estimated 111,000 persons living with HIV in New York State. Challenges remain as we work to meet the HIV prevention and care needs of vulnerable communities.

The Role of the AIDS Institute: For over 30 years, the AIDS Institute has been a national leader in advancing comprehensive HIV prevention, care, support services and programs to address HIV-related stigma and discrimination. Within the AIDS Institute, the Division of HIV/STD/HCV(HCV) prevention supports a comprehensive prevention approach with interventions and strategies to prevent both transmission and acquisition of HIV/STDs and HCV. Services include client engagement; health education and promotion; individual- and group-level prevention counseling; testing/screening and linkage to care; partner services; ;community awareness; essential support services, training and technical assistance; and capacity building.

Recognition of the Important Role of Faith Communities in HIV Prevention in NYS: Early in the epidemic, NYS recognized the importance of involvement of diverse sectors of communities in fighting HIV/AIDS. By 1989, when the Department of Health published the results of an extensive consultation and planning process to develop a 5-year strategic plan in a far-reaching document, AIDS New York's Response: A 5-Year Interagency Plan, the importance of involving all sectors of the community, including faith communities, in HIV prevention was clear.²

Subsequent studies commissioned by the AIDS Institute to further identify how best to meet HIV prevention needs of New York's communities.

The results of these projects, published in documents such as Cultural Factors Among Hispanics: Perception and Prevention of HIV Infection, Hispanics and HIV: Strategies and Tactics for Education/Prevention, AIDS & African-Americans: It's Time for Action! and A Native American leadership Response to HIV and AIDS underscored the need to engage and involve community leadership, including leadership of faith communities, despite the challenges of doing so.³⁻⁶

Why are religious institutions an ideal setting?

- Most people claim a religious affiliation.
- Religious organizations serve all classes, races, and age groups.
- Clergy are respected as a credible source of advice and guidance.
- Religious organizations have a history of helping communities.
- Health information can be communicated to hard-to-reach populations.
- Religious organizations are a socializing force in America, particularly for communities of color.

Beginning with the very first Comprehensive HIV Prevention Plan for NYS completed in collaboration with the NYS HIV Prevention Planning Group (PPG) in 1995, and in every Plan or Plan Update thereafter, the need for faith community involvement is reflected.⁷⁻¹⁴ The PPG remains a principal collaborator for the Division of HIV Prevention; together the PPG and the Division have further developed the Faith Project.

Recognition of the importance of faith community involvement in HIV prevention efforts was carried forward by the NYS AIDS Advisory Council. It is reflected in the Council's report *Communities at Risk: HIV/AIDS in Communities of Color released in 2001.¹⁵

All of the above-mentioned publications were broadly distributed throughout NYS and beyond.

Why Faith Communities? Because prevention programs must be broad-based, religious institutions are an ideal setting for prevention efforts. Most mainline denominations have established AIDS ministries to address the crisis. Networks have been dedicated to HIV prevention and a variety of resources have been developed.

Realizing the ongoing challenge of reaching people of color, the African-American church is a catalyst for gains in educational opportunities, voter registration, and economic advances. Therefore, minority religious organizations can and do play powerful roles in the fight against HIV..

AIDS Institute Program and Services

Funding of Faith-Based HIV Prevention

Programs: Since the early 1990s the AIDS Institute has contracted with faith-based agencies to meet the HIV prevention needs of individuals, families and communities reflecting various racial/ethnic groups, cultures, languages, etc. These agencies and organizations fulfill a variety of roles in support of HIV prevention. By 2001 there were 13 faith-based organizations receiving grant funding through the AIDS Institute and, in addition, five organizations provided case management services for persons living with HIV and their families with financial support through the NYS Medicaid Program. In addition, the AIDS Institute's Anonymous Counseling and Testing Program collaborates with faith-based organizations at the local level to make HIV testing available.

Faith-Based Agencies...

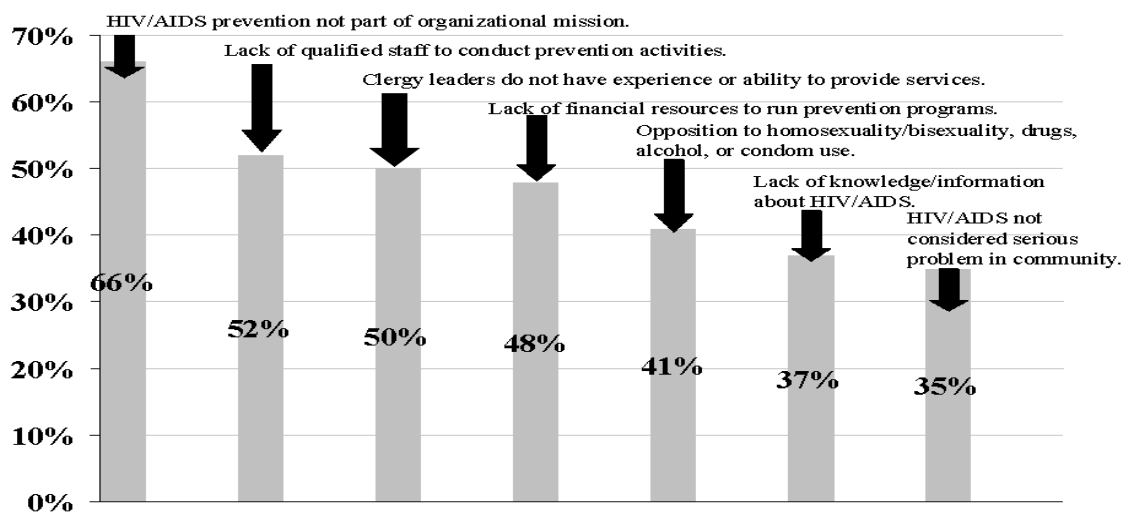

- Develop community leadership.
- Improve social and living conditions.
- Establish cultural and recreational services.
- Provide peer education, outreach, and prevention.
- Assure community awareness.
- Serve as a source of HIV prevention information
- Refer individuals to HIV testing and prevention services
- Fulfill leadership roles in communities they serve
- Establish HIV/AIDS "care teams"

Technical Assistance for Faith Communities and Community Based Organizations (CBOs): A Guide to HIV/AIDS Education in Religious Settings was developed by the AIDS Institute in collaboration with faith communities throughout New York State and published in 1998,¹⁶ and updated in 2012. It was a direct outcome of recommended strategies contained in AIDS & African-Americans: It's Time for Action (1993).⁵ The Guide provided educational materials and guidelines for faith leaders to counsel their congregants on issues surrounding HIV/AIDS. It was mailed directly to over 12,000 registered faith communities and is available on the AIDS Institute's website.

Learning More About Involvement of Faith Communities in HIV Prevention: In October 1997, the AIDS Institute mailed a survey to over 12,000 religious organizations in NYS. To supplement an initial poor response, follow-up telephone calls were made to obtain a sample of 3,197 respondents (25% of all religious organizations in NYS). Only 17% of respondents reported that they provided or facilitated HIV-related prevention services to their community. Referrals for services were made by 49% of organizations and 35% offered no services or referrals.

Close to 50% of organizations located in New York City said that they did not provide, facilitate or offer referrals for HIV prevention-related services, even though New York City has the highest rate HIV cases in New York State.

Reasons for Not Providing HIV/AIDS Prevention Services

The most common services offered by the 525 faith communities that provide HIV prevention-related services were distribution of HIV literature (51%), on-site HIV/ education (48%), and HIV support groups (24%). Less common services included HIV testing referral (13%), information about hypodermic needles and syringes (7%), and distribution of condoms (3%).

There was a low perceived need of services among Jewish organizations and organizations with congregants who are white (56%) and Asian/Pacific Islander (55%). In addition, 41% of religious providers in areas identified as "high need areas" by the AIDS Institute's Community Needs Index perceived a low need for HIV-related services among their community members.

Faith communities reported that they were willing to explore the possibility of offering or enhancing HIV-related service

The most encouraging finding of the survey was that 50% of the respondents expressed a willingness to meet with community-based HIV service providers. This included 60% of organizations with primarily Hispanic congregants and 74% with primarily African American congregants.¹⁷

Forums: Based on the stated willingness of faith communities to explore the possibility of becoming more involved in HIV prevention, the AIDS Institute and PPG collaborated on community forums to convene religious leaders and HIV service providers in order to gather views and perspectives on barriers, strategies, and best practices to create community linkages. Three forums were held in 1999-2000 to identify existing successful approaches to working together as well as barriers which inhibit such collaboration and to learn about the technical assistance needs of faith communities and HIV service providers. These forums were successful, yielding a wealth of information regarding models of collaboration. Lines of communication were established, relationships fostered and subsequent activities ensued.

Fact Sheet: As a result of the forums, the AIDS Institute developed a fact sheet of suggested strategies and "tips" (enclosed) for use by faith communities and community-based organizations seeking to work with each other. This fact sheet was distributed, together with a letter which conveyed the results of a statewide survey of religious organizations, to all AIDS Institute-funded HIV prevention providers in December 2000. The mailing also indicated the availability of contact and composition information for faith organizations.

Faith Communities Project (FCP): At the January 2001 meeting of the NYS HIV PPG, a proposal for a Faith Communities Project - - jointly developed by the AIDS Institute's Division of HIV Prevention and the PPG's Racial/Ethnic Committee - - was adopted as a priority project for support from by new Supplemental Funds received from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The AIDS Institute's application to CDC for Supplemental Funds included, as a component, the Faith Communities Project. The AIDS Institute's proposal for Supplemental Funds was approved.

In anticipation of receipt of Supplemental Funds, the Division of HIV Prevention initiated recruitment for a full-time staff person to:

- * coordinate all relevant efforts around faith community issues;
- * encourage and assist local/regional clergy/CBO collaborations, including follow-up with potential and existing collaborations resulting from previous activities in the Capital District;
- * update existing materials, such as the Guide, and develop new materials;
- * prepare reports;
- * recommend approaches for integrating faith community issues within the Regional Gaps Analysis;
- * network with other state agencies having faith-based initiatives to determine options for collaboration;
- * explore similar efforts underway in other states and identify models that could be adopted/adapted for use here;
- * mobilize technical assistance; and
- * keep the PPG informed of State-supported work in this area.

A staff person for the Faith Communities Project, Carol Tyrell, was appointed in September, 2001.

A major, two-day Statewide conference, "Meeting on Common Ground: The Role of Faith Based Communities in HIV/AIDS," was held at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City in November 2001. The conference, attended by 175 individuals, was targeted toward representatives of faith communities serving racial/ethnic minorities, professionals and volunteers providing HIV prevention services in communities of faith, people living with HIV/AIDS, and representatives from non-AIDS specific community-based organizations. Conference evaluations, completed by participants, indicated that the conference was very well-received. Short- and long-term action plans, including regional meetings, are being developed as an outcome of this conference.

Regional Needs Assessment and Planning Activities: Participants of the November 2001 conference, "Meeting on a Common Ground: The Role of Faith Based Communities in HIV/AIDS", identified specific regional needs. Committees were developed in each region to address issues and initiate planning to meet identified needs. Over 400 individuals participated in 31 local planning meetings. Regional committees developed action plans that highlighted local needs and specified specific tasks to be completed.

During 2002 - 2003 regional committees designed and implemented activities that directly related to meeting identified needs as described in the action plans. Activities implemented included: HIV awareness events, educational presentations to faith leaders and community representatives, and local meetings to network and continue to support partnerships.

By 2003 a statewide network including active local committees was in place. The AIDS Institute continues to foster regional partnerships, support information sharing, and identify resources to further HIV prevention and care efforts in NYS.

Active Support and Involvement in Regional Activities: During 2003-2004 the AIDS Institute supported regional action plan activities throughout the state. Activities included conferences, Chat and Chew monthly sessions, Prayer Breakfasts/Health Fairs, HIV-related topical forums, HIV training, a Spiritual Retreat, technical assistance workshops and quarterly meetings.

National HIV Testing Day, held in June each year, provides an opportunity for the AIDS Institute and local faith communities to work together. HIV testing is offered in various venues statewide each year.

The AIDS Institute also participated in the statewide "Breakthrough Sunday" initiative, in partnership with a Faith Based Organization in Buffalo, to increase HIV testing within faith communities. "Breakthrough Sunday" events were held in various locations across the state, including Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Albany on August 10, 2003. Over 500 individuals were tested.

Specific technical assistance workshops held in conjunction with on-going regional activities during 2003 included:

- Affirming A Future with Hope: HIV & Substance Abuse Prevention Curriculum for African American Communities of Faith
- Developing Your Nonprofit Faith-Based Program: The Key to Success
- Strategies for Working with Faith Communities on HIV/AIDS Prevention

Regional Action Plan Activities: During 2004-2005, the AIDS Institute continued to support regional action plan activities to increase awareness and foster collaborative relationships between faith communities and community based organizations.

Activities included, but were not limited to, the following: Balm in Gilead Black Church Week of Prayer for the Healing of AIDS;

community forums; quarterly "Open Dialogue" dinner series with faith communities and consumers; health fairs;

conferences; World AIDS Day community observances; and capacity-building workshops to strengthen the capacity of faith-based ministries to address HIV prevention and care issues.

Ongoing Support of Regional Activities: During 2005-2006, the AIDS Institute continued to support regional activities to strengthen collaborative relationships between faith communities and HIV service providers. In addition, the AIDS Institute collaborated with the Office of Community and Minority Affairs at Columbia University to foster great understanding of the social factors that impact communities of color and contributes to the disproportionately rates of HIV on communities of color, and to dialogue with faith leaders on how to address these issues in their congregations.

Activities included, but were not limited, to the following: Clergy Roundtable discussions, interfaith dialogues and community forums on topics ranging from: HIV and Older Adults; A Closer Walk: A film about AIDS in the World; Faith Communities Response to HIV and AIDS; HIV & Spirituality: Addressing the Spiritual Needs of Persons Living with HIV; Youth and HIV; Black Church Week of Prayer events; National HIV Observances; Healing Retreats; Faith-based nursing; developing Congregational CARE Teams; and the making of a Memorial Quilt.

Intergovernmental Collaborations:

During 2003 through 2015, the AIDS Institute developed and continues to maintain relationships with federal, state and city agencies with similar efforts to reach faith communities:

- City and state partnerships. The AIDS Institute sponsored four faith forums with the New York City Department of Health and Mental Hygiene between 2003 and 2007.
- Federal and state partnerships. The AIDS Institute collaborated with liaisons from Faith-based and Neighborhood Partnership Subcommittee of Region II Federal Partner Council, federally designated "Faith Centers" (HUD, USDA, DOL, DHHS) to disseminate information, share resources, increase awareness about funding opportunities and enhance the capacity of faith communities to apply for federal funds. In addition, in 2005, the AIDS Institute collaborated with the Office of Minority Health Research Center to plan a conference to address HIV in the African community of New York City; and again in 2008, to co-sponsor the second statewide faith forum: Responding to the Call: Faith Communities' Response to HIV in Poughkeepsie, NY, to highlight faith based HIV prevention activities, and to address the issues that continue to challenge HIV prevention efforts in faith communities: stigma, discrimination and the spirit of sexuality.

- State agency partnerships. The AIDS Institute worked closely with the NYS Department of Family Assistance Office of Children and Family Services and Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance as well as the NYS Office of the Prevention of Domestic Violence and the NYS Department of Corrections and Community Supervision to promote programs and services available to faith communities.

The AIDS Institute participated in the newly created Interagency Faith-Based Liaison meetings. The meetings are coordinated by the Office of Children and Family Services and are designed to discuss activities currently underway in NYS government agencies to reach faith communities and discuss opportunities to collaborate. Participating agencies include the Office of Children and Family Services, Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance, Department of Education, Office of Prevention of Domestic Violence and other agencies.

Intergovernmental collaborations such as these expand faith communities' access to information, resources and technical assistance.

Communication and Networking: AIDS Institute staff developed numerous mechanisms to maintain ongoing communication and foster information sharing between and across regions.

- Conference calls are used to plan regional activities, to discuss program evaluations and to provide updates on regional and statewide events.
- E-mail is used to communicate meeting minutes, training opportunities, resources available, and regional/statewide events.
- An electronic List serv was created to enhance regional and statewide information sharing and networking between community-based organizations, faith communities and the AIDS Institute.

Technical Assistance Workshop Series for Faith Communities: The AIDS Institute received a grant from the New York City HIV

Ryan White Title I Planning Council to develop and implement a series of skills-building workshops for faith communities in New York City. Workshop topics included: Developing Successful Nonprofit Faith-Based Program; Developing Your Community Development Corporation; Grant Writing; Resources Available to Faith Communities and a session on HIV & Spirituality. In addition, the grant also supported the PWA Faith-Based Summit II, held in

In 2005-2006, the AIDS Institute worked with Metropolitan Interdenominational Church Technical Assistant Network(MICTAN), the faith-based organization funded by the CDC, to provide technical assistance workshops to faith-based and community-based organizations in upstate New York. Technical assistance workshops included: "Engaging and Partnering with Faith Leaders for Access and Use of HIV Prevention Services: Training for Health Departments and Community-Based Organizations" and "Mobilizing Communities of Faith for HIV Prevention: A Training for Ministers and Faith Leaders".

In addition, the AIDS Institute collaborated with the Community Research Group of Columbia University School of Public Health to provide technical assistance to faith communities in Upper Manhattan to implement "Family to Family: A faith-based structured intervention to strengthen family functioning and reducing risk". The program was presented to faith communities in various regions of the state.

Workshops, Presentations and Articles:

The Prevention Planning Group (PPG) and the Division of HIV/STD/HCV Prevention collaborated on workshops, presentations and articles on the importance of involving faith communities in HIV prevention to local, statewide and national audiences. Information has been presented by the AIDS Institute and PPG at several conferences, including: American Public Health Association (APHA), Washington, D.C., 11/98¹⁸; Community Planning Leadership Summit for HIV Prevention, Pittsburgh, PA, 2/99¹⁹; Centers for Disease Control and Prevention HIV Prevention Conference, Atlanta, GA 8/99²⁰; APHA, Chicago, IL, 11/99²¹; the Balm of Gilead Conference, Myrtle Beach, SC; and at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention HIV Prevention Conference, Atlanta, GA 7/03.²² In addition, New York's efforts were featured in the NASTAD Bulletin.²³ In April, 2004, "Engaging Faith Communities in HIV Prevention in New York State..." was presented to an international audience at the 18th World Conference on Health

Evaluation of Faith Communities Project: In 2005, the AIDS Institute convened a workgroup to conduct a sample-based follow-up to the 1997 statewide survey. The purpose of the survey was to assess how many organizations that responded to the 1997 survey were involved in the FCP and to ascertain that we had racial/ethnic and geographical diversity. Result of survey “Early Results of a Statewide Initiative to involve Faith Communities in HIV Prevention” was published in the Journal of Public Health Management Practices in 2008. 14

Between 2006-2007, a survey was self-administered to program participants who attended regional events and activities. The purpose of the survey was to get a profile of program participants and to assess if the project was meeting its stated objective. 590 individuals completed the survey. The results indicate that 82 percent of participants were Christians who felt that their knowledge increased a lot as a result of attending the regional events and has resulted in increased HIV prevention and health care efforts in their faith communities.

In 2008, a five-page self-administered survey, similar to the one that was administered to faith institutions in 1997, was mailed statewide to NYSDOH AIDS Institute funded direct service providers. The purpose of the survey was to gather information from CBOs on existing HIV programs and activities in faith communities, assess their willingness to work with faith communities and to identify barriers or challenges to establishing and sustaining collaborative relationships with faith communities to advance HIV prevention and care efforts.

The results of the survey indicate that 95 percent, almost all of the CBOs, were somewhat interested in providing HIV prevention services to faith communities. However, the lack of financial resources, faith organizations' beliefs related to same sex relationships and condom use, and the lack of staff were the most common barriers to providing prevention/education services to faith based organizations..

Evaluation of FCP Program Participants: Between 2014-2019, several surveys have been self-administered to participants to assess their knowledge, attitude and beliefs about the following: NYS HIV and HVC testing laws, early treatment, impact of HIV/AIDS on gay men, especially young gay men of color in NYS, HIV related activities in their congregation; LGBT ministries and or task force in their congregation; HIV service providers in their community; welcoming people in same gender relationship in faith communities. Results from surveys have indicated that 94% of participants agreed that faith communities should be open and welcoming to people in same gender relationships and 61% agreed that their faith community is welcoming; 63% were knowledgeable about HIV testing laws. Recent surveys asks about Pre Exposure Prophylaxis (PEP) and Pre Exposure Prophylaxis (PrEP) knowledge. Results indicate that only 57.1% knew about PEP and 55.4% knew about PEP. Since 2016, PEP and PrEP information has been included at every faith-based program.

Academic Partnerships/Collaborations: In 2012, the AIDS Institute Division of HIV/STD/HCV Prevention in partnership with The Office of Community and Minority Affairs at the Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University convened a forum series, to explore the intersection of faith and health; to explore if the integration of faith and health-related topics in the curriculum of medical, public health and seminary programs can foster sustainable partnerships between faith communities and community/public health institutions to enhance public health response to epidemics. Over 300 persons attended the regional forum series:

On 3/16, New York Theological Seminary hosted and cosponsored the first forum in partnership with Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York City Department of Health and Mental Hygiene in New York City, and community based organizations and faith communities in NYC.

On 4/20, Colgate Rochester Crozer hosted and cosponsored the second forum in partnership with St. Bernard's School of Theology and Ministry, Northeastern Seminary at Robert Wesleyan College and community based organizations in Rochester.

On 4/16, the University Of Albany School Of Public Health hosted and cosponsored the third forum in partnership with Albany Medical College and the Capital Region Theological Center

The forum agenda included a keynote presentation by Tanenbaum Center for Interreligious Understanding; conversations with academic deans, students, and seasoned practitioners on preparing medical/social work and nursing students to address faith related issues and preparing divinity students to address health related issues, on the value of integrating these topics in the preparation of future practitioners; examples of current academic and community practices of integrating faith and health and, clergy perspectives on what divinity students need to know, beyond theology, to prepare them to respond to emerging health issues.

As a follow up to the 2012 Forum Series, in 2013, the AIDS Institute Division of HIV/STD/HCV Prevention in partnership with The Office of Community and Minority Affairs at the Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, developed and implemented a faith and health survey to assess faculty and student perceptions of the intersection of faith and health; inclusion of topics in academic programs, and the value of preparing future clinicians and practitioners to understand the relationship between faith beliefs and health outcomes. Divinity, Medical, Social Work, Public Health and Nursing students (560) and faculty (147) from 11 academic institutions participated in the survey.

In 2013, the AIDS Institute Division of HIV/STD/HCV Prevention in partnership with The Office of Community and Minority Affairs at the Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University also convened a follow-up forum series on the intersection of faith and health was in Albany (11/20), Rochester (12/6) and NYC (12/20), to continue the conversation. The forum series "Sustaining Partnership to Improve Public Health Outcomes" highlighted examples of successful faith and community health partnership; discussed strategies to develop and maintain sustainable partnerships between academic institutions and health departments; and explored challenges and opportunities for academic institutions to integrate spirituality related topics in their curricular to affect and strengthen public health outcomes. Approximately 300 persons attended the forum series.

In 2014-2015, in alignment with the AIDS Institute's priority to address the increasing incidence of HIV among gay men, especially young gay men of color, and the Governor's goal to decrease the incidence of HIV and end the epidemic in NYS by 2020, the FCP forum series, continued to explore the intersection of faith and health, focused on opening doors to health and wellness for gay men and other men who have sex with men (MSM). In collaboration with academic institutions, (divinity schools in Rochester and NYC; U Albany School of Social Welfare and New York City Department of Health and Mental Hygiene- NYCDOHMH), CBOs and NYCDOHMH, the forum agenda identified strategies to expand and sustain alliances with faith communities to; dialogued with gay men and faith leaders on how to open doors to health and wellness for gay men in faith communities, especially young gay men of color; and explored with academic address (LGBT)-related issues and “do no harm”; highlighted the findings from the Social Justice Project and the importance of spirituality and religion amongst LGBT people of color presidents and deans on the preparation of students to affirm the health and wellness of gay men and MSM.

In 2017, the FCP collaborated with Suffolk County Community College, Suffolk and Nassau County Departments of Health, Office of Minority Health Services, Westchester Medical Center Health Network, Metropolitan Interdenominational Church, Colgate Rochester Crozer Divinity School, New York Theological Seminary and the Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, to explore the role to faith communities in ending the HIV epidemic in New York State.

Integrating LGBT Awareness in Faith-based Programs: Between 2014 -2019, the FCP has implemented a series of activities to integrate LGBT-related concerns in faith communities: updated the faith-based ministries and service directory to include LGBT Ministries and Task Force; modified the faith communities project’s self-administered participant survey to include gender identify and sexual orientation questions in the demographic section, and added knowledge, attitude, and beliefs (KAB) questions regarding LGBT and faith related concerns; administered survey at FCP program to assess the KAB of FCP participants regarding LGBT, faith and HIV related issues. Expanded the LGBT and Faith series to include an overview of gender identify and sexual orientation to allow congregations to understand these issues; conducted a Town Hall Meeting with Black Gay Men on the importance of faith on their health and wellness; hosted a two-part webinar series on Spirituality, Religion and Faith and gay men of color and how to partner with faith communities to address LGBT concerns; and addressed the spiritual care needs of persons who identify as Transgender, Non-Conforming, Non-Binary (TGNCNB).

Ending the Epidemic in NYS: In October 2014, Governor Cuomo unveiled his three-point plan to end the AIDS epidemic in New York State by the end of 2020. A Task Force was established to develop and synthesize recommendations, which are presented in New York’s “End the Epidemic” (ETE) Blueprint. The recommendations focus on New York State’s highly successful existing HIV prevention and health care efforts to identify undiagnosed persons; link and retain infected individuals in care; and utilize biomedical interventions such as pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) to prevent infections among persons who engage in high-risk behaviors to keep them HIV negative, while addressing stigma and discrimination to reduce associated health disparities. The FCP included information regarding the ETE Blueprint in all regional programs.

Role of Faith Communities in Ending the Epidemic in NYS

In 2017, the regional forum series, held in NYC (6/20); Long Island (2/27 & 9/14), Rochester (9/19) and Poughkeepsie (10/17), focused on the role of faith communities in Ending the AIDS Epidemic in NYS by the end of 2020. The forum agenda included a keynote address on engaging faith communities in Ending the Epidemic (ETE) by Rev. Edwin Sanders, Senior Servant of Metropolitan Interdenominational Church, presentations on specific activities faith communities can do to contribute to the HIV care continuum, conversations with clergy and persons living with HIV or AIDS on the role of faith communities in realizing the ETE goals, and barriers to implementing the “Blueprint” recommendation in faith communities, luncheon discussions to identify specific activities faith communities can do to encourage testing, to know your status; early treatment and staying in care, to maintain viral suppression; and promoting PrEP and PEP, for HIV negative persons, in congregations and the community, and encouraging faith communities to lend their voices to local efforts to develop local plans to end the epidemic in their region, and strategies to engage and sustain faith communities’ involvement in ETE activities. Over 400 persons attended the forums.

Addressing the Spiritual Care Needs of Persons who Identify as TGNCNB in Faith Communities:

In 2018, in partnership with the NYC Center for Faith and Community Partnership, New York Theological Seminary, Center for the Study and Practice of Urban Religion and the Mount Sinai Center for Spirituality and Health, and the Pastoral Care Department of Erie County Medical Center, the FCP conducted a forum and training for faith leaders, chaplains, pastoral and spiritual care leaders, and divinity students on best practices in the spiritual care of persons who identify as transgender, non-conforming or non-binary. The forum and training included presentations, panel discussions with transgender clergy and lay persons, and workshops on how to creating affirming congregations, supporting families with transgender and non-binary children, advocating and standing with the transgender community, a transgender 101 overview and how to care for and support persons who identify as transgender or non-binary in medical settings; and opportunities to network with providers and clergy who are addressing the health and spiritual care needs of the transgender and non-binary community.

Clergy Advisory Group: In 2004, the AIDS Institute formed a Clergy Advisory Group to provide guidance to the Project on faith-related issues. Since its creation, the Advisory Group has assisted the AIDS Institute and the Department of Health to develop technical assistance and educational materials for faith leaders and communities.

Engaging Faith Communities During the Covid-19 Pandemic 2020-2022 – during the COVID-19 pandemic, the FCP sent COVID-19 information and resources to faith communities including guidelines related to the public health emergency, COVID-19 facts, testing and vaccine information and locations and how congregations can safely gather. In addition, the FCP utilized virtual platforms to stay engaged with faith communities. Virtual programming was utilized to provide updates and education and a myriad of topics such as addressing mental and spiritual health during a pandemic and the intersection of Covid-19, Domestic Violence and HIV.

Looking Back Moving Forward: 20 Years of Engaging Faith Communities in HIV Prevention and Health Care Efforts in NYS.

On November 4 2021, the FCP commemorated the 20th anniversary of engaging faith communities in HIV prevention and health care effort in NYS The event, entitled, "Looking Back Moving Forward..." was held virtually. The morning session included an interfaith panel of faith leaders who "looked back" and shared their personal involvement in HIV prevention, during a difficult time in the history of HIV prevention when fear often overshadowed compassion. The afternoon session focused on exploring how to move forward in partnership with faith communities to end the HIV epidemic in NYS. It featured an interfaith panel of faith leaders, persons living with HIV and service providers.

Collaborating with Faith-Based Organizations to Improve Access to Health Promotion and Prevention Information and Services

On 11/30/2022, the FCP facilitated a virtual discussion, at the 2022 ETE Summit, "Collaborating for Change, Partnering for Health Equity", on how faith communities, healthcare and community-based organizations are collaborating to improve access to health promotion and prevention information and services, to enhance health equity. The workshop illustrated the impact of faith-based collaborations and discussed challenges and opportunities related to faith-based and healthcare collaborations. It included presentations by a Rabbi of an LGBT Synagogue working with community-based organizations (CBOS) and healthcare organizations (HCO) in Lower Manhattan to increase access to health services and other information; a Reverend working with faith-based organizations in Rochester to develop health ministries; a Reverend working with an HCO to educate African American and Latino faith leaders about health issues impacting the communities they serve; CBO staff working with Latino religious leaders to promote health education; and a lay leader of a faith community collaborating with CBOs/HCOs to bring health education/information and services to an Upper Manhattan community.

Suggested Strategies for Working with Faith Communities

The purpose of this fact sheet is to provide helpful, practical advice to service providers who are trying to create and maintain relationships with the faith leaders and their communities. Information is based on 3 forums held between August, 1999 and June, 2000 with providers and faith community leaders.

Exploring the backgrounds, histories and commonalties of faith leaders

- * Acknowledge rather than challenge the theological beliefs of the faith community. Stress mutual respect.
- * Visit the faith community prior to your official meeting with the pastor or faith leader.
- * While attending church services, introduce yourself during welcoming phase of service.
- * Use "The Handbook of Denominations" for reference on a particular faith.
- * Attend projects within the church, such as special ministry meetings, lunch programs and community events.
- * Read church bulletins and materials and find out if the church has any newsletters or web sites and e-mail addresses.
- * Be flexible with your availability on evenings and weekends.
- * Try to identify people within the congregation who are open to your ideas.
- * Utilize AIDS Institute religious survey results and see which faith communities are willing to be approached.
- * View your relationship with faith leaders as an on-going process. You may need to start small.

Relationship building and providing HIV/AIDS education

- * Provide faith leaders with facts regarding prevalence and incidence in their immediate area.
- * Educate key leaders in the community, call one another and work to co-sponsor forums and health fairs.
- * Provide HIV education at church meetings and other community events such as the National Church Week of Prayer and healing meetings.
- * Share newsletter mailing lists and e-mail addresses.
- * Include the faith leaders in service treatment plans and invite leaders to attend AIDS 101 training.
- * Provide free samples of materials and grant funding information to congregations.
- * Incorporate AIDS issues in health forums intended for broader health-related issues.
- * Focus on the concordance between the religious doctrine of non-judgmental compassionate care and the acceptance of people with HIV/AIDS.
- * Acknowledge that sex, sexual orientation and condom distribution are difficult issues for ministers to speak about.
- * Tailor messages to specific congregations and stress the benefits of outreach awareness programs.
